Karen Schoonover, director and curator of the Art Gallery of Regina, shows off one of the oil paintings by Regina-born artist Andrew Salgado, inset. The London-based Salgado's exhibition, The Acquaintance, opens on Wednesday.

Regina-raised painter wowing the art world

The Acquaintance.
Andrew Salgado heading home to Queen City for exhibition

Although Andrew Salgado holds shows all over the world, his new exhibition in Regina is proving to be distinctive — and it's about more than hometown pride.

The show at the Art Gallery of Regina will be the first non-commercial exhibition for the painter, who was born and raised in the Queen City before shifting his base to London.

"It's a very personal kind of homecoming for me," said Salgado, 30, who left Regina for Vancouver nearly 10 years ago to attend art school.

"The fact that it is a museum show ... it's a pretty big deal."

Salgado explained that he has been able to work without creative interference from the gallery, allowing him to focus on the scale and techniques of the works and, in a sense, break away from his previous autobiographical pieces. Titled The Acquaintance, the exhibition — opening on Wednesday — features eight larger-than-life abstract portraits of strangers.

"It's an interesting idea that someone you don't even know can project all these ideas," said Salgado, who took four months to create the exhibition.

"In a way, I am asking all the viewers to look at these people and leave with some sort of narrative and inspiration."

Karen Schoonover, director and curator at the gallery, said the show has "a real narrative" in its subject matter.

"He reveals the character of the subject as well as the character of the paint," Schoonover said. "We were really attracted by the lushness and energy of his work. It's very distinctive."

Salgado's family and friends, his previous two years of studies at the University of Regina and the experience of his first art classes at the local Neil Balkwill Civic Arts Centre are combining to sweeten his trip back to Saskatchewan.

"It's like the high school reunion I never had, I suppose," he said.

"I think people are kind of excited to see what I have been up to, (and) I wanted to come back with a bit of a bang."

The exhibition will run until Nov. 22, with Salgado appearing at a reception for it on Oct. 22. After his Regina show, he has exhibitions scheduled in New York City, London and Cape Town, South Africa.

Donny Parenteau says he came up with the idea after speaking with a girl who had

He performed the song Imagine A World on Tuesday in front of students at James L. Alexander School in Saskatoon.

Parenteau says he was bullied as a child and hopes the song will raise awareness about the problem.

He has also made a video that has been posted on YouTube, and says the song will be distributed to radio stations. THE CANADIAN PRESS

They're far too young to vote, but were given a chance on Tuesday to advise the education minister on their schools' needs.

About 15 local Grade 6 students made recommendations to Education Minister Don Morgan and school division directors on how they would improve the classroom experience.

"We've started a process where we are listening to students and we'll move on to parents and educators," Morgan explained about the goal of the discussions at the Regina Public School Board office.

"We want to spend a lot of time with teachers to try and develop the best possible learning environment we can."

school in 2020 — a target year for the Saskatchewan government's plan to increase the workforce in the province by 60,000 people and cut the drop-out rate of aboriginal students by half.

He noted that some of the key issues identified in the discussions with students are classroom sizes and transportation.

However, two pupils from Regina's Sacred Heart School were focused on an entirely different issue — the state of that school's gymnasium, which has been out of commission since last year because of concerns about its structural integrity.

Leon Agecutay-Peigan and his sister Cassandra told a group of school division officials that the lack of a usable gymnasium has made it difficult to arrange assemblies and sporting events.

"(Our) teams can't have home games," Leon said.

Their mother, Karen Agecutay, said she is disappointed by the absence of the gym, and because a planned temporary replacement facility had not been ready for the beginning of this school year.

Cari Bondy, community co-ordinator with the Regina Catholic School Board, explained that progress is being made on renovating part of a neighbouring church to use as a temporary gym. She noted, however, that the renovations would be limited because the church has signed a lease agreement with a tenant that would prevent certain modifications.

Police will be cracking down on aggressive driving during a two-day blitz. MARCO VIGLIOTTI/METRO

Police look to curb aggressive drivers

Police across Saskatchewan will target aggressive drivers on Thursday and Friday as part of a new safety clampdown.

Law-enforcement officers will use Operation Fall Frenzy to focus on violations such as "speeding, driving too fast for road conditions, running red lights, not stopping at stop signs, stunting, racing or passing to the right on a highway,"

Saskatchewan Government Insurance (SGI) said on Tuesday in a press release.

"Deterring aggressive driving by applying enforcement is only part of the solution," explained Regina police Chief Troy Hagen.

"The real battle is changing the mindset of every driver. You don't own the road; you share it.... Lives do depend on it."

The campaign will be held in conjunction with Operation Impact, a four-day national blitz co-ordinated by the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police — also targeting aggressive driving.

According to SGI, aggressive driving contributed to more than 10,000 collisions in Saskatchewan alone last year, resulting in 92 deaths and more than 4,300 injuries.

During a traffic blitz spearheaded by SGI last month, police issued 352 tickets provincewide for speeding in school zones, in addition to 483 citations for other violations.

Last year's edition of Operation Fall Frenzy resulted in 1,079 tickets, including 620 for aggressive driving.

More than a month after the first leak, Hockey Canada and Nike officially unveiled our hockey jerseys for the 2014 Winter Olympics. Amid club music and laser lights, Fresh findings.

Auditor flags series of payments to Mike Duffy's friend Gerald Donahue, a former TV technician

An RCMP allegation that Sen. Mike Duffy awarded $65,000 in Senate contracts to a friend who did little actual work is the latest twist in the case of the troubled former Conservative.

The Mounties filed a production order in an Ottawa court on Tuesday to gain access to bank-account records related to the allegation. They are looking at new allegations of fraud and breach of trust against Duffy, based on fresh findings.

"That investigation determined that Sen. Duffy hired a friend as a consultant over an approximate four-year period and paid him a total of approximately $65,000 during that time, for little or no apparent work," wrote Cpl. Greg Horton, the lead investigator.

Duffy said in an email that it would be "inappropriate for me to comment while these matters are being examined by the RCMP." No charges have been laid against Duffy.

An auditor flagged a series of payments to Duffy's friend Gerald Donahue, a former TV technician.

Between 2009 and 2012, Duffy asked the Senate to pay Donahue for a range of writing services including speeches, advice on web page design and development and general media consulting.

But Donahue told police that he didn't do any writing and never produced any tangible document, report or work product and never worked on the website.

"The work he performed for Duffy was limited to research and verbal advice," says the police report of an interview, adding that it was Duffy who devised a $200-an-hour "inflated" payment.

Spy allegations put Canada-Brazil military ties at risk: Experts

A carefully cultivated military relationship with Brazil could be damaged by the unfolding spy drama involving Canada's super-secret eavesdropping agency, defence and diplomacy experts say.

Since late spring, a platoon of Canadian soldiers has been embedded with a Brazilian army unit as part of the United Nations peacekeeping mission in Haiti.

The deployment, slated to run until Christmas, has been considered an important bridge-building effort with South America's biggest military power.

Walter Dorn, a professor at the Canadian Forces Staff College in Toronto, says the scandal will give Brazil second thoughts about Canada as a reliable partner.

THE FUTURE IS HERE, BUT NO ONE CARES

If you were ever a kid, you'll remember dreaming about having your very own two-way wrist communicator.

Jimmy Olsen had one to stay in touch with Superman. All he had to do was press the button, and a cool zee-zee-zee sound would summon the Man of Steel.

In fact, anyone who was anyone in the fantasy universe had one, from Dick Tracy to Captain Kirk to Knight Rider to the Power Rangers.

Now you can have one, thanks to Samsung, which has just released the Galaxy Gear. This device gives your wrist a very high-tech panache and allows you to link up to your Galaxy phone via Bluetooth and talk at your wrist.

Too bad the fantasy is still better than the reality. Because the Gear has no brain, i.e. SIM card, of its own, it's

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan

pretty much a local version of the phone in your pocket. And only if that phone is a Galaxy Note 3. You'll have to wait for the next version to hook up to more phones and functionality. But if you want to be the first Inspector Gadget on your block and you have $300 to spend on a half-baked idea, knock yourself out.

Still Samsung has succeeded at one thing... its outstanding commercials recapture the gee-whizzery of the wrist phone, as they take us through a gallery of fantastic applications from the comics and movies leading to the next big thing: Your BFF right there on your wrist, ready to two-way, just like Jimmy Olsen and Superman.

What's interesting is that I don't care. And neither, apparently, does anyone else.

The Galaxy Gear has been released with a big tech thud.

It's partly because the watch itself appears to be a work in progress, but the Samsung ads are technically accurate — if oversimplified — and you have to wonder why the smart wrist watch — and other gee-whizzicker products such as Google Glass — don't bring the magic.

Aren't we delighted that the future has finally arrived?

Maybe it's because now that it's here, we don't really like it. It comes with baggage, such as greenhouse gases and Miley Cyrus. And now that we can communicate without wires, it's all too obvious that most of us don't really have anything to say. Hashtag fail.

And instead of escaping into the next future, we're so freaked out by the one we're in that we can only imagine dystopian scenarios featuring the zombie apocalypse, where the zombies know where we are at all times thanks to GPS.

The Galaxy Gear is really an old-fashioned idea. It belongs in the Dick Tracy era with our collective childhood. Your real mobile device is much more powerful and just as handy.

The real future, sad to say, isn't for kids.

If you've seen one Hanks, you haven't seen them all

New movie. The star of Captain Phillips has avoided being typecast over the years and continually delivers diverse performances

Tom Hanks' Captain Phillips opens this weekend. CONTRIBUTED

When you think of the movies of Arnold Schwarzenegger or Sylvester Stallone, gut busting action comes to mind. The names Steve Martin and Adam Sandler are forever connected to comedy, while Daniel Day Lewis is synonymous with serious drama. Meg Ryan? She'll always be a romantic comedy star just as the mere mention of Robert Eglund's name can send a chill down the spine.

But what about Tom Hanks? Hanks is a rarity among A-listers. He's an actor who has avoided stereotyping by pasting together a résumé that includes almost every genre of film.

This weekend he stars in Captain Phillips, a drama based on the true story of the 2009 hijacking of the MV Maersk Alabama by Somali pirates.

It's a heroic role — in real life President Obama said Capt. Richard Phillips' courage "is a model for all Americans" — but it's a far cry from his last movie, Cloud Atlas, which saw him play three characters, one of which tossed a critic out of a skyscraper window.

His varied IMDB listing includes everything from comedies like Splash ("What you looking at? You never seen a guy who slept with a fish before?") to Academy-Award-winning dramas like Philadelphia, where he played a gay lawyer with AIDS suing his firm for discrimination, and Forrest Gump.

In the kids' classic Toy Story (and its subsequent sequels) he's Woody, a stuffed pull-string cowboy doll. Director John Lasseter says he wanted Hanks to play the character because of his "ability to take emotions and make them appealing."

Much darker is Road to Perdition, the 2002 Sam Mendes film that cast Hanks as Michael Sullivan, Sr., an ace hitman who must protect his son from a mob assassin.

"I just got this guy," says Hanks. "If you're a man, and you've got offspring ... emotionally, it's devastating."

Different still is Nothing in Common, a dramedy that saw Hanks play a successful advertising executive trying to cope with his parents' (Jackie Gleason and Eva Marie Saint) break up.

Hanks says, "I'm not looking for any particular kind of story," and his varied approach to his work hasn't hurt him one bit. Recently he was named America's "best-liked movie star," in a poll by Public Policy Polling.

Kate's kid dreams of a neon-green wedding

Kate Hudson and fiancé Matt Bellamy have been engaged for more than two years but have yet to set a wedding date — which is apparently a problem for Hudson's older son, nine-year-old Ryder, who has been applying "a little bit" of pressure on the actress to walk down the aisle.

"I think he looks forward to more the party than the actual idea of us getting married. He apparently wants to wear a neon green tux," Hudson tells Ellen DeGeneres during an interview. "He loves neon green. He wants to wear neon green with black. That's pretty cool. He's a bit of a fashion boy."

Drew Barrymore

A Griswolds-style family would be dandy with Drew

Drew Barrymore's first child, daughter Olive, may just be a year old, but Barrymore is ready to do the whole pregnancy thing again, telling that she and husband Will Kopelman "very much" want another baby — and "right away," if possible. "I grew up as an only child, and although that really works for some people and for some parents that's the way they want to do it, I want to be the Griswolds," she says. "I want the kids in the back rolling their eyes at mom and dad. I want Rusty and Audrey, theme parks and the whole nine."

Headed to Mexico this winter? Want to go surfing? Hidden away on the Pacific Coast, the town of Puerto Escondido is generating buzz thanks to a starring role in HGTV's season premiere of Live Here, Buy This! The draw? The Mexican Pipeline, an unforgiving wave that attracts an international surfing crowd. Travel writer Michele Peterson created an app offering an insider's guide to Mexico's Surf City. Here are a few excerpts.

Cafes & quick bites: Osa Mariposa

This hip hostel, just two blocks from the beach, appeals to backpackers and surfers. Choose from private bungalows or shared dormitories (four to a room). The clean and spacious bathrooms are superior to many others in this price range. The on-site restaurant offers a menu of tasty veggie and vegan options. Don't miss the black bean veggie burgers. Mescal and tequila figure highly at the bar. The website has a helpful map. You'll need it to find the place: osamariposa.com.

Lodging: Aqua Luna Hotel

This sleek, minimalist boutique hotel owned by an Aussie long boarder and his Mexican wife, offers a sophisticated escape in 16 rooms at wallet-friendly prices ranging from $25-$70 per night or $700 monthly for kitchenette rooms. The pearl-white walls, violet-hued swimming pool and adults-only policy creates a sensual Miami SoBe retreat, conveniently perched above Zicatela, the hippest beach with the most wave action. hotel-aqualuna.com.

Adventure/culture: Oasis Surf and Language School

Even your pre-schooler can take Spanish classes at this professional language school located in the Rinconada neighbourhood. The school offers beginner, intermediate and advanced classes as well as specialized medical Spanish for health-care professionals. A full slate of cultural activities is available, including a learn-to-surf program. The school can also arrange volunteer experiences if you'd like to give back to the community and practise your new lingo at the same time. Visit oasislanguageschool.com. A five-day week of one-and-a-half-hour language classes costs about $75 US. Surfing classes cost around $35 US per class, with discounts on packages.

Natural attractions: Zicatela Beach

The main strip flanking Calle del Morro is packed with surf shops, restaurants, cafés, hotels and booming nightclubs. If you long to feel the sand between your toes, the wide beach is dotted with loungers, Bali beds and hammocks — all free to use with the purchase of a consumo (drink or snack). This is where the epic Mexican Pipeline wave breaks, so the main draw is surfing, but you can also take yoga classes, have a massage or book an excursion all within a few block radius. Strong surf and undertow makes this beach dangerous for swimmers. The red flag is always flying but depending on the tides, it's possible to find a shallow tidal pool and splash about like a duckling.

Bars & drink: Casa Babylon

Bookstore by day, nightclub by night. This unusual combination of bookstore/coffee shop and nightclub is weird enough to work. An eclectic decor of Mexican masks, Asian statues and rough-hewn furniture morphs effectively from a quiet haven into a pulsing nightclub with techno music, reggae, funk and live bands. Exchange some books, play a board game or two and then come back to party.

Cruising

A riverboat fantasy—come true

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
lifem@metronews.ca

The exploding popularity of river cruising is hardly surprising.

The most endearing quality of a river cruise is the intimacy it offers. A standard ship has capacity for 150 to 200 guests versus an ocean liner, which typically has 1,000-plus guests onboard. This allows you to get to know your travelling companions and removes the annoyance of having to stand in long lines to embark, disembark or simply enjoy a meal. River cruising also provides easy access to the destinations. At most stops you can wander into town from the dock or hop a short coach ride to a city centre. The distances between stops are typically much shorter than a standard cruise, allowing for the possibility of one to two stops per day and never having to spend a long day at sea. Although the most popular routes are in Europe, there are sailings available in countries as diverse as China, Russia and Vietnam.

There are various companies in the market. At the top end is Scenic Tours. They appear to be on the pricey end but bear in mind they are the only true all-inclusive river cruise company. The other big players are Uniworld, AMA, Viking and Avalon. Emerald Waterways is the latest company to ply the rivers. It is a four-star product with fewer services and a lower price point, all aimed at attracting a younger demographic.

LOYALTY LOVE AFFAIR

Consumer loyalty programs have become an ingrained part of Canadian life. From the iconic Canadian Tire money to the latest digital smartphone wizardry, competition continues to evolve and raise the stakes for businesses and deliver benefits to consumers.

Canadians are global leaders in loyalty program participation. The average Canadian household is active in 9.2 programs. By comparison, the average American household is active in only 6.2 programs.

An ongoing study by Canadian research firm Abacus Data found that an astounding nine in 10 Canadian adults belong to loyalty programs.

"These statistics haven't really shifted much during the three surveys we conducted in 2013," says Sean Copeland, Abacus Data's director of consumer research. "We consistently see most Canadians using three or more rewards programs on a regular basis to collect points or miles for future redemption."

The most popular loyalty programs in Canada are Air Miles Rewards (seven in 10 Canadians), and the Shoppers Optimum program (three in 10 Canadians). While these cards won't disappear from Canadian wallets anytime soon, there are big changes on the horizon as Canadian businesses adjust to the shifting consumer loyalty landscape.

Research shows Canadians are most interested in loyalty programs that are simple, clear, and deliver instant rewards.

The American retail giant Target, currently opening stores in Canada, is taking heed. Target's "Red Card," a branded debit or credit card, gives shoppers an instant five per cent off at checkout for every purchase.

Target aims to not only draw new customers, but to also fill each shopping cart with a little more merchandise. Experts contend that the Red Card adds between one and two per cent to the total of each checkout at Target, and more established Canadian competitors are expected to follow suit with similar offers.

An emerging trend in consumer loyalty programs is the use of smartphone-based applications to replace physical cards.

Canada's largest grocer recently launched a new digital loyalty program targeting customers with individually tailored promotions. PC Plus, the Loblaw program, targets customers using their purchase histories, offering discounts on items they buy regularly, along with products they might be interested in, but need an incentive to try.

— Peter Doyle

CONSUMERS WANT MORE AND WANT IT NOW

While Canadians are still very much in love with consumer loyalty programs, it appears the relationship has moved into a new and more demanding phase.

Token gifts and promises are no longer enough — consumers now want bigger rewards, and expect to be able to access them sooner.

The attitude shift became clear following Loblaw's acquisition of Shoppers Drug Mart. Optimum, the pharmacy retailer's rewards card, is Canada's most popular customer reward program. When the acquisition was announced, Optimum members flooded social media sites and the program's call centre with their concerns. Both retail chains were forced to reassure consumers about the program's future.

"Canadians have grown up with loyalty programs in many circumstances, so there's almost an expectation," says Kevin O'Brien, chief commercial officer at Aeroplan Canada.

O'Brien is all too familiar with the potential consequences of failing to meet consumer expectations. In 2006, Aeroplan announced an expiry date for points accumulated under the program.

DMITRY KALINOVSKY/COLOURBOX

Not surprisingly, consumer reaction was intensely negative and Aeroplan's subsequent struggles led to a complete redesign of the program — and new credit card partners — earlier this year.

Clearly, consumers no longer consider rewards a simple perk; today, they expect to be properly compensated for their loyalty. Most members of customer loyalty programs recognize they are providing retailers with valuable information; they are determined to get something in return. Goodbye romance, hello interest-based negotiations.

A 2013 white paper published by Envisionics Research reflects just how much the loyalty program landscape has shifted. The paper reviewed 22 loyalty programs and outlines a new way to determine their relative value — a measure it calls "time to reward." The new measure takes into account both the potential value of reward points a consumer receives for a given purchase, as well as the amount of shopping required before "cashing in" those points.

"When it comes to loyalty programs, what is ultimately most important to the consumer is being able to understand how long it will take them to achieve their desired reward," the study states.

The report suggests that the best way to meet these expectations — and to retain members — is to provide consumers with opportunities to collect points quickly, such as through "double-dip" offers (twice the amount of rewards for buying specific products).

REAP YOUR REWARDS FASTER

Loyalty programs offer the opportunity to be rewarded for purchases you make every day. However, with so many programs to choose from and so much information available, it is easy to miss out on the ones that would get you to your chosen reward faster.

To help clear through the clutter, a new, free online tool (compareloyaltyprograms.ca) asks a few simple questions and recommends up to three programs that will get you to your chosen rewards faster based on your preferred rewards, lifestyle and shopping habits. What's really new and unique about the tool is that it strategically evaluates cards based on "time to reward" or how quickly you can reach your desired reward.

According to the 2013 COLLOQUY Loyalty Census, the average Canadian household is involved in about eight loyalty programs. Rewards fall into three categories — cash, merchandise or travel — and, historically, people have signed up from the point-of-view of "how much do I have to spend in order to get rewards."

"But it's not just about the dividend or payout rate that these programs offer," says David MacDonald, group VP, custom/financial, Environics Research Group. "It's about how you accumulate points and how quickly you can get a reward of some sizable value to you."

The tool, which was created by Environics Research Group, is quick and simple to use. All you have to do is enter a bit of information about shopping preferences and habits, and which type of rewards you prefer. Then, the tool determines up to three Canadian loyalty programs or affiliated credit cards that are most likely to get you $100 in rewards faster.

The evaluation is based on substantial research into Canadians' habits using loyalty programs and what kinds of rewards they prefer, says Ken Wong, marketing professor at Queen's School of Business, Kingston, Ont., who reviewed and approved the research methodology.

"The tool provides just three cards to consider, and that is easier than consumers having to compare 20 or 30 programs."

Also, you can fill out the tool several times if you want to see how differences in shopping habits and choices impact the variables and the cards recommended.

"The three cards you are presented with make most sense for the spending patterns you have entered," MacDonald says.

HOW TO MAXIMIZE PROGRAMS

• Reduce the number of loyalty programs you belong to, says Frank Pons, professor of marketing, Laval University. "When people have a lot of loyalty programs and cards, the tendency is to disperse points. Cards are really efficient if you focus on just one or two specific programs."

• Aggregate your points. "The more often you use the same card, the more points you will accumulate, and the faster you will get rewards," says Ken Wong, marketing professor at Queen's

School of Business.

• Choose loyalty programs based on your lifestyle. If you have the same card you had as a student and now you are married with kids, you probably aren't taking full advantage of points. "Maybe one spouse should sign up for one rewards program and do most of the shopping in that category and the other person do another," says David MacDonald, group VP, custom/financial, Environics Research Group.

• Double dip. Take advantage of loyalty programs that are affiliated with a credit card. "I was using a loyalty card and an unaffiliated credit card, and that forced me to spread my points rather than put them together and double up points," Wong says.

• Be wise with credit. Credit card programs can be a great way to super-charge your time to reward — there are often additional bonus rewards simply by using the credit card. But if you don't pay off the credit card balance every month, Pons says, you end up paying interest and not making a lot of money.

Thai take on Butternut Squash soup

1. In a stock or large soup pot over medium-low, heat the oil. Add the onions, garlic and salt and cook until the onions have softened, about 10 minutes. Stir in the ginger and curry paste and cook for a minute or two more. Add the squash and water and bring to a boil. Reduce the heat and simmer until the squash is tender, 15 to 20 minutes.

2. While the squash is cooking, zest and juice the lime. Add about a teaspoon of the zest and 1 tablespoon of the juice to the pot (reserving the extra). When the squash is tender, stir in the coconut milk.

3. Transfer soup to a blender or food processor, then purée until smooth. Be careful when blending hot liquids.

4. Return all of the soup to the pot and reheat. Taste and adjust the flavour as you wish with spoonful of sugar, if desired, as well as additional lime juice and/or curry paste. Stir in the spinach and cilantro and heat until just wilted. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/ (RECIPE ADAPTED FROM THE MOOSEWOOD COLLECTIVE'S MOOSEWOOD RESTAURANT FAVOURITES, 2013, ST. MARTIN'S GRIFFIN)

Who's turning up at the interview table?

Interrogation differentiation.

Four types of tough interviewers and how to handle each

MEGHAN GREAVES
TalentEgg.ca

Walking into an interview is not the most relaxing activity out there.

This is partly because interviews come with many unknowns.

What questions will an interviewer ask? What skills should you focus on? How long will the interview be?

One of the biggest unknowns when going into an interview is: what will the interviewer be like?

An interviewer's personality can be a hard thing to predict until you actually come face to face in the interview. To help you be savvy to the types of interviewers you might face as a student or new grad on the job hunt, here are a few dominant interviewer personality types and how to adjust successfully to them on the spot.

Rambling

A rambler is an interviewer who is chatty, friendly and outgoing.

Though this behaviour may be a relief when you first start the interview, try not to let your guard down too much.

In order to ensure that you're able to communicate the information that matters (skills, experience and so on), you'll need to single out the relevant aspects of the discussion and answer each question concisely and skillfully.

Shy

Usually it's the interviewee who feels shy, but interviewers can be a ball of nerves as well. If you encounter a shy interviewer, the main thing

Don't let this trio of tough talkers intimidate you. Keeping calm and carrying on will show them you're ready to cruise into this career. ISTOCK is to understand that this is just their personality — not that you're performing poorly. Shy interviewers can be hard to read, difficult to create a conversation with and may wrap up the entire thing quickly.

The smart thing to do in this situation is to pick up on their personality type right away so you don't panic. To ease the atmosphere, try to be friendly, put them at ease and end in a positive way with a handshake.

Harsh

The great thing about this type of interviewer personality is that you'll recognize it the moment you walk in the door, which gives you more time to adjust successfully.

With questions being fired rapidly, an edgy tone and intimidating body language it can be easy to unravel on the spot. The key to magnificently performing with a harsh interviewer is to keep your composure. Take your time to answer each question, speak in a calm and paced manner and minimize small talk.

Inexperienced

Shaky hands, questions that don't flow together, quick exits and awkward conversations are all signs of an inexperienced or unprepared interviewer.

As the interviewee this can be surprising, but the key to having a stellar interview with an inexperienced interviewer is not being thrown off track. With this type of interviewer you need to be sure that even though they might not be addressing questions that allow you to showcase your information, you do it yourself.

Keep to your key points of discussion, relate them back to the position at hand in plain language and treat the interviewer professionally in order to keep things on track.

Sandusky scandal

Penn State settles with abuse victims

At least 19 young men have settled with Penn State over assertions of abuse by former assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky, according to lawyers for the claimants.

Many, if not all of them, have received cheques from the university, the attorneys said over the past two days. The school has set aside some $60 million to pay claims, though several lawyers say the settlements prevent them from disclosing details, including the amounts their clients were paid.

Sandusky, 69, the school's longtime assistant football coach under Joe Paterno, is serving 30 to 60 years in prison for sexually abusing 10 boys over 15 years.

Harper: Authorities have been letting fighting slide

Stephen Harper has dropped his prime ministerial gloves and put on his hockey historian's helmet to wade in on the subject of violence in Canada's most popular sport.

And he did so from a beach-front hotel in Bali,

Indonesia, of all places.

Harper, who has a book out next month on the early history of pro hockey, said it's a rough sport but he's an admirer of skill over brawn.

"I do think that authorities have historically not taken their responsibility to try and keep the rough, tough part of the game within the rules," Harper said, adding he's concerned about head shots.

Tigers rally past A's with a little help from their friends

MLB. Disputed home run stands as Detroit forces Game 5 in Oakland on Thursday

The Detroit Tigers are heading back to California with the help of Max Scherzer and some fans in right field.

Scherzer escaped a major jam during a relief outing to remember — one inning after two fans reached out to try to reel in Victor Martinez's disputed home run — and the Tigers rallied past the Oakland Athletics 8-6 on Tuesday to force a decisive fifth game in their AL division series.

Playing catch-up most of the way, the Tigers tied it first with Jhonny Peralta's three-run homer in the fifth inning and then on Martinez's solo shot in the seventh. A couple of fans attempted to catch Martinez's drive, and at least one of them bobbled the ball as he reached over the railing above the wall, preventing right-fielder Josh Reddick from having any chance at a leaping grab.

Reddick and centre-fielder Coco Crisp immediately protested, pointing up at the stands in the hope of a fan-interference call. But umpires upheld the home run after a replay review.

Scherzer, making his first relief appearance since the 2011 post-season, gave up a run in the seventh and got in trouble again in the eighth. With the Tigers ahead 5-4, he allowed a walk and a double to start the inning, but after an intentional walk to load the bases, manager Jim Leyland left his 21-game winner on the mound.

Scherzer struck out Reddick and Stephen Vogt before getting pinch-hitter Alberto Callespo to line out to centre.

Detroit, which had no hits through the first four innings, added three runs in the eighth on a wild pitch and a two-run double by Omar Infante that made it 8-4.

Yoenis Cespedes hit a two-run single in the ninth, bringing the potential tying run to the plate, but Joaquin Benoit struck out Seth Smith to end it.

I'm loving it: Avs' big Mac settling into NHL

Nathan MacKinnon GETTY IMAGES

Teenager Nathan MacKinnon is clearly enjoying his NHL-rookie-season ride.

The 18-year-old centre from Cole Harbour, N.S., was all smiles Tuesday prior to the Avalanche's 2-1 win over the Maple Leafs in Toronto.

The Colorado rookie took the time to pull on an Avalanche cap in his dressing-room stall and then enthused about life in the big league.

Asked what has surprised him about the NHL, he replied: "I guess how good they treat us here.

"It's awesome. I'm loving every second of it. The travelling with the team, the way that they treat the players is pretty special. Obviously a little different than junior but I can't complain about that either; it's been great."

MacKinnon's parents flew out for the Toronto game.

The Avs are taking care not to pile on the pressure on the top overall pick in the 2013 draft. MacKinnon, who has four assists in his first three games, is playing on the third line with Jamie McGinn and P.A. Parenteau.

"It's the perfect fit for him," said head coach Patrick Roy. "He doesn't have to come here and be the saviour. He can come in here and be himself and play."

"He's been outstanding in the first two games, despite the fact that he had an injury in training camp. We're very excited and we love what we have seen so far of him."

The 2013 Acura TL

Review. Acura's top sport sedan is looking great and getting old gracefully

drive@metronews.ca

The fourth-generation Acura TL launched for model-year 2009, and is due to be replaced any time by a new, fifth-generation machine. It's far from the freshest or newest model in its segment — but the current Acura TL is one of the most established.

That's thanks in no small part to its delivery of performance, technology and everyday sensibility alongside two things premium shoppers love: an honest price tag, and a promise of reliable, no-nonsense ownership thanks to Acura's gleaming reputation for reliability.

The gist? The TL is getting old these days, but it remains a staple product in its segment that's well-deserving of a test-drive. The looks might still be controversial, but the TL remains a great machine to drive, and a car special to the Acura brand. The current-generation TL put Super Handling All Wheel Drive (SH-AWD) technology into the mainstream luxury sedan market. And, though it was late to the game, it pushed Acura sedans past the 300-horsepower mark at long last.

All of this exists in a highly-usable package. There's generous room for four adults, plenty of at-hand storage, and a great looking, three-dimensional look to the instrument cluster, dashboard and controls. In all, you get unique styling that very much does its own thing while creating a distinctively upscale, techy atmosphere. Proper cup-holders, deep door bins and a sense of always having a place for your stuff help round out the package.

Key competitors include the BMW 5-Series, Audi A6 and Infiniti G37. Though not pack-leading where output is concerned, the big V6 is very pleasing to listen to and really piles on the juice at high revs as the VTEC power-cam kicks in. The six-speed automatic works well with the engine for smoothness and response, supporting a sporty but very refined character.

The SH-AWD system, as noted on numerous other test-drives, has benefits which are two-fold. First, on slippery stuff, it finds surprising levels

ALL PHOTOS BY JUSTIN PRITCHARD

2013 Acura TL

- Fuel economy. 9.9L/100km
- Engines (hp). 3.7L V6, 305 horsepower, VTEC.
- Transmissions. Six-speed automatic
- Base price (incl. destination) (TL SH-AWD Elite) $49,450

Key strengths

This isn't a machine that begs for attention, but rather focuses on sensibility and a quiet, confident demeanor. And, though high-tech and sporty, the TL is easy to drive, easy to learn and requires nothing of the driver when they'd prefer to relax and enjoy a peaceful drive.

Key complaints

Simply, it's getting old. The navigation and infotainment read-outs are due for an overhaul, and so are many of the controls and interfaces on board. More power would help the TL earn the dollars of driving enthusiasts, and the lack of folding rear seats limits cargo carrying capacity.

Engine

All models get a VTEC V6 engine displacing either 3.5 or 3.7 litres. There is a larger unit, which has 305 (hp) through a SH-AWD system through a six-speed automatic. Thankfully, a manual transmission/AWD combo is also available. Standard models get the 3.5 litre powerplant and front-wheel drive.

of traction — using sophisticated computer controls and fast-acting magnetic clutch packs to extract the most forward momentum from the ground beneath. Second, when drivers push the TL's limits a little, the system "overdrives" the inside rear wheel, which slightly slides the tail out and points the nose inwards in a sort of mini-drift.

Translation? You get playful agility and locked-on confidence, depending on what your right foot is up to on the surface in question.

That's all directed by a heavyset steering system that confidently transmits a sense of agility and playfulness to the driver, too. End of the day, few sedans are this all-out confident and discreetly entertaining when pushed hard.

Powerful and fairly communicative brakes back up the performance capabilities — and when you're on a relaxing drive, wind and road noise levels are kept adequately in check, as is fuel consumption. This engine might not have all the latest fuel-saving gadgets, but I still averaged under 10 litres per 100 km over the course of a week.

Other notes? The xenon projector lights are fantastic, and the big doors and big comfy seats make this an easy car to get in and out of, even many times per day. Finally, blind-spot monitoring and a slew of fully-automatic or voice-commanded features on the "Elite" grade test model I drove added a sense of effortless relaxation on lengthy road trips.

Numerous competitors are more modern-looking, both inside and out. A comparable Audi or Lexus will boast a more striking cabin, and a comparable BMW or Mercedes will likely prove more all-out comfortable.

The new TL has yet to be seen — but for the time being, shoppers after a car that's discreetly sporty, offers a proven reputation, delivers plenty of character and delivers a pleasing overall driving experience should add the current TL to their "to test drive" list.

TL's dashboard may not be as fancy as other makes, but still works well.

A rear-end view of the Acura TL.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Scorpio is a sensitive sign and that sensitivity can be both a blessing and a curse. Which one it is today depends on how easily you let yourself be annoyed by petty events.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You'll need to employ a certain amount of critical thinking over the next 24 hours, especially when dealing with new ideas, as some people may find them a bit outrageous.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You're in a friendly mood and that's good because the more you smile and say nice things the more you'll get the kind of offers you like. What kind are they? The kind that pay lots of money!

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You will be impatient with people who get in your way today but hopefully not so impatient that you start a fight. Slow down, calm down and try not to take little things personally — they're not.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

If you are confused about something then you must speak up, even though you don't like to admit to your ignorance in front of other people. The important thing is to get it right. SALLY BROMPTON
